Minimal Tract

This residence is in T-Plan with an intersecting gable and composition roof. There is an attached single garage which has been converted into living space and a car port added directly in front of the original garage. The house has a continuous concrete foundation and a variety of aluminum windows both fixed and vertical. The siding is wide weather board. This house is in excellent condition.

This house was built by Charles Stryker as his family residence is one of four similar houses in this area using recycled cedar lumber from Camp Adair.
